Duties and Responsibilities

Spring/Fall Semester Intern

- Exhibitions – The intern will produce three to four physical art exhibitions at the McKinney Center. Virtual tours and interviews related to the exhibition will also be created to provide access to exhibitions for viewers from the Tri-Cities and beyond. These tours should be designed to not only showcase the artwork, but to also engage viewers in a deeper understanding of the artists, artworks, and concepts on display. Interns will be expected to interview artists, hang artwork, create labels, write press releases, etc.
- Education Outreach – Intern will assist in the planning and implementation of special outreach events. Create artistic projects for children and youth at Town and regional events. Intern will create displays for events, sample projects, and will educate the public about the McKinney Center.
- Marketing – Intern will create marketing pieces and advertising including, but not limited to, monthly member newsletters, social media content, posters, and other graphics.
- Guided Tour – The intern will produce a 30 – 45-minute guided tour for the public that will showcase the history and founding of the Booker T. Washington School, the history of black education in Jonesborough, and the process of segregation in Washington County, Tennessee. The intern will interview past students and alumni of Booker T. Washington School and conduct research on relevant topics. The intern will put together research to assist in training future interpreters and will create a virtual tour for training purposes.

McKinney Center at Booker T. Washington School Mission Statement

The McKinney Center at Booker T. Washington School houses Jonesborough's Mary B. Martin Program for the Arts and is dedicated to providing quality multicultural art opportunities to the community. The McKinney Center serves as a preserver of its historic building and is committed to documenting and interpreting the history and stories from the Booker T. Washington School. The McKinney Center is a devoted community space intended to welcome, and engage, and bring together, all members of the community.

Jonesborough's Mary B. Martin Program for The Arts Mission Statement

Jonesborough's Mary B. Martin Program for the Arts is committed to inspiring the people of our area through both the appreciation of and participation in the arts as a form of personal and collective expression. Located in the McKinney Center at the historic Booker T. Washington School, the objective of the program is to bring the community at large closer together and show as an example to other communities the creative influence that the arts can bring to their quality of life. The program implements the various forms of art (visual, theatre, dance, music) using multicultural influences as a means of demonstrating the many avenues through which ideas can be expressed.
